阅读下面文章, 并从A、B、C、D中, 选择一个最佳答案, 使短文意思完整。

A

In Britain, guide dogs(导盲犬) are the “eyes” for many blind people. At first, Lucy went to a woman's home when she was three months old. For nine months, the woman trained (训练) her to walk, sit, stop and lie down.

When Lucy was one year old, she went to a special(特别的)school for dogs. It has a street route (路线), like a town. There Lucy learned to guide a person round holes and across the streets. She had to look for holes in the ground and high-up dangers too, like trees.

When Lucy passed all her tests, Dick came to the training center to meet his “eyes”. Dog and person must like each other. If they do not like each other, they will not work together. Dick stayed at the training center for four weeks. He learned to walk along the route with Lucy. In the end, they went out into the real town for practice trips.

Dick is now back at home after his four weeks' training. Every day he walks with Lucy to his job in a factory. He is the telephone operator (电话接线员). The other workers love Lucy. She spends the day in a corner of his office. When they got home in the evening, Dick cleans Lucy's feet and gives her evening meal—meat and dog-cakes.
